THE VITAL RECORDS OF MARSHFIELD, MASS.

Literally transcribed from the original records,

BY GEORGE ERNEST BOWMAN.

The first volume of the Marshfield town records is in a very dilapidated condition, but further decay has been prevented by the Emery process. This book contains records of town meetings, and of births, marriages and deaths, the latter being paged independently. In 1879 the vital records were copied for the town by Israel H. Hatch, and a comparison of his copy with the original record has enabled the present transcriber to supply a few names and dates which have disappeared in the meantime. Everything which is not now on the original record has been enclosed in parentheses.

The original paging is indicated by figures enclosed in brackets.

BRADFORD GOV^R

Wheras a Diference hath arisen between the Inhabitants off the Towne of Sandwidge and the Sachem off Manomett and other Indians conserning a Tract of upland called quitnite the said Sachem with the Rest haveing chosen Miles Standish senior and John Alden senior; And the said Townsmen of Sandwidge haveing chosen Robert Dennis of Yarmouth and John Smith of Barnstable to arbetrare and fully to conclude and end the aforesaid Diferences; all the said pties of Sandwidge and the said Sachem haveing given full power to end and conclude all Diferences betweene the said pties Diferinge for any matter of Land

Wee therfore haveing waighed the arguments on both sides according to our best understanding have; all the said pties that is to say Miles Standish John Alden Robert Dennis and John Smith mutually concluded all the said Diferences conserning the Land off quitnite as followeth; videlecet wee Doe by these p^rsents in full satisfaction wee give unto the said Sachem &c. twenty six acres of upland onely for all that the said pties have can or may challenge in full satisfaction for all Rightes claimes or Demaunds of all or any pte of the said Lands appertaining to the Towne of Sandwidge except the formencioned twenty six acres of upland; Alsoe wee Doe mutually agree and conclude the said Sachem &c shall have the twenty six acres of Land in one Intire place provided it bee in the best and fittest Land for their use; Wee alsoe graunt to the said Sachem &c libertie to fell fitt wood to ffence the said Land upon any p^{te} of the said quitnite alwaies provided incase there bee not sufficient upon the twenty six acres of upland; further It is concluded that the said Indians make a sufficient fence att their owne Dammage; and that the said Sachem shall for himselfe and all other Indians that shall Resort to him; shall undertake for him and them that neither hee or any such Indians that they shall not Damnifye the said Townsmen of Sandwidge by killing or hunting any such cattle as they shall att any time put upon the said necke : and incase any cattle bee hurt or killed by the Indians upon Due prooffe the aforsaid Sachem shall make the Dammage good ; and that there may bee naighbourly agreement between the said Indians and the Townsmen of Sandwidge

Alsoe It is concluded by the said Miles Standish John Alden Robert Dennis and John Smith that the said Sachem and all that appertaine to him or Resort unto him shall not hunt or chase the cattle of the towne of Sandwidge ; And if the said Sachem shall see any of the cattle of the English in any Danger the Sachem shall p^rsently give notice to som man or men of the Towne of Sandwidge

To all the aforementioned conclusions Wee have subscribed our hands This 15th of April 1653

This bible was printed in London, by "John Baskett, Printer to the Kings most Excellent Majesty, and by the Assigns of Thomas Newcomb, and Henry Hills, deceas'd. 1715." Bound with it is "The Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs . . . London, Printed for Tho. Varnam and John Osborn, at the Oxford-Arms in Lombard St. 1713."

The bible belonged to the present owner's great-great-grandmother, Rachel Cobb, the daughter of John Cobb of Middleborough, by his wife Rachel³ Soule (John², George¹). Rachel Cobb was born at Middleborough, 8 December, 1702,* and married Moses⁴ Standish (Ebenezer³, Alexander², Myles¹) of Plympton. Their daughter, Rachel Standish, married Philemon Sampson of Plympton, and, after his death, Amos Fuller of the same town, and by her second husband had two sons, Amos and Philemon, the latter being the grandfather of the present owner of the bible.

All of the entries, except those on the cover, which were evidently made by Rachel Cobb soon after the book came into her possession, were made by Rachel (Standish) (Sampson) Fuller, who died at Plympton, 13 October, 1809, having survived her second husband nearly nineteen years.

DEPOSITIONS.

Under this caption the Editor will present, from time to time, literal transcripts, from the original records, of depositions giving the ages of some of the Pilgrims and their descendants. In many instances such a record furnishes the only means of determining, even approximately, the year in which the deponent was born. Occasionally a deposition proves that the age at death contained in a town record or gravestone inscription is incorrect, for a man's own statement of his age must be considered better authority than a record made after his death. Two of the depositions appended illustrate the tendency to overstate a person's age after his decease.

[Plymouth County Deeds, I : 81]

Jacob Cooke aged fifty six years or there about dus testifie on my Certaine knowledge that m^r John Coombs had a lott of

* Philemon Sampson died 1756. The entry was a mistake. Note date of second marriage, 1759.

Land Lying on the south side of the lands that was formerly Phineas Pratt's that now is Edward Gray's and he did enjoy it to my knowledge Several years and Cutt the wood on it and Carried it to the Towne by water and sold it, and it did Run down to the sea side as Phineas Pratt's did.

Taken upon oath this 14th day of July 1674 :

By me Constant Southworth Assist :

From the foregoing deposition it is evident that Jacob² Cooke (Francis¹) was born about 1618, at Leyden, and must have been about five years of age when his mother brought him to Plymouth in the Anne, in 1623.

[I : 81] Phineas Pratt aged eighty one years or thereabouts Testifie that the Lands formerly which I did live upon and did enjoy at Plimouth that land or lott Containing twenty acres or thereabouts which lay on the south side of that which was mine was granted by the Court unto m^r John Combs and there was no Common betweene those lands and the said Combs did enjoy that lott and Cut wood upon the land and Sold.

Taken upon oath this last day of June 1674

Before me Constant Southworth Assist

The inscription on Phineas Pratt's gravestone, at Charlestown, Mass., states that he died 19 April, 1680, aged "About 90 Y^{rs}." But we must accept, as more trustworthy, his own statement in the deposition, and assign the year 1593 as the approximate date of his birth. Phineas Pratt married Mary² Priest (Degory¹).

[I : 81] I ffancis Billington of 68 years of age doth Testifie that to my best Remembrance that m^r John Combes had a parcell of Land lying upon the south side of that parcell of land that was Phineas Pratt's which John Cooke Bought of him, and Goodman Gray bought of John Cooke :

The oath of ffancis Billington taken this 10th day of July 1674

Before me Constant Southworth Assist.

According to the Middleborough records * Francis Billington died 3 December, 1684, "aged 80 years." From his deposition we learn that he was born about 1606. Consequently he was about fourteen years old when his parents brought him to Plymouth on the Mayflower, and about seventy-eight when he died.

At the County Court at Plimouth the third Tuesday of march 168²₃ John Gray of Plimouth produced the above testimonies before sd Court and Requested to have them Recorded and the Court granted his sd Request and advised the same be done : which is done accordingly :

CONNECTICUT SOCIETY.

The Annual Meeting was held at the Crocker House, New London, on Thursday evening, December 21, 1899. After the business meeting Rev. James G. Johnson, D.D., the Elder of the Society, delivered an address on "How the Pilgrims Asserted their Influence over the Greater Body of Emigrants, and Planted the Germinal Idea of the Nation." PILGRIM NOTES AND QUERIES.

NOTES.

THE MAYFLOWER GENEALOGIES. — The first installment of the Mayflower Genealogies will appear in the April issue.

STEPHEN HOPKINS' SECOND WIFE. — The statement that Elizabeth, the second wife of Stephen Hopkins, was the daughter of Francis Cooke seems hardly to need contradiction. If Elizabeth had been a daughter of Francis Cooke, her daughter Damaris would have been the niece of Jacob² Cooke (Francis¹). But the fact that Damaris² Hopkins (Stephen¹) became the wife of Jacob² Cooke is sufficient evidence that her mother was not Jacob's sister, and therefore was not Francis Cooke's daughter.

RICHARD WARREN'S WIFE. — That Richard Warren of the Mayflower did not marry Elizabeth (Juatt) Marsh becomes evident when it is stated that in 1628, the year of his death, Elizabeth Juatt was still unmarried and only about fourteen years old; while Richard's widow Elizabeth was the mother of seven children, of whom at least one was older than Elizabeth Juatt.

QUERIES.

[This department is limited to subjects connected with Pilgrim genealogy and history. Answers should be sent to the Editor for publication in later issues.]

17. SNOW. Who were the parents of Abijah Snow, who was born 21 December, 1754, and married, at Abington, Mass., 18 November, 1775, Sarah Porter?
H. C. W.

18. COOMBS — EATON. Who were the parents of Mary Coombs who married, 18 December, 1689, Benjamin³ Eaton (Benjamin², Francis¹), of Plymouth? M. M.

19. WASHBURN — PERKINS. Who were the parents of Mary Washburn, who married, 20 February, 1717, Thomas Perkins, of Bridgewater? M. A. M.

20. WASHBURN — LEONARD. Who were the parents of Marjoram Washburn, who married, 2 November, 1699, Josiah Leonard, of Bridgewater? E. F. P.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

16. WALKER — WARREN. Since the publication of this query the Editor has found the following record, which furnishes an interesting clue to the ancestry of Sarah (Walker) Warren. The fact that this petition was not made by William Collier, but by his wife Jane, seems to indicate that Sarah was her granddaughter by a former husband, but unfortunately it is not conclusive evidence. It appears, therefore, that there were three ways in which Sarah Walker could have been Jane Collier's granddaughter. First, Sarah's mother might have been the daughter of William and Jane Collier. Second, Sarah's father might have been the son of Jane Collier by a former husband named Walker. Third, Sarah's mother might have been a daughter of Jane Collier by a former husband of unknown surname.

COL. SETH WASHBURN'S JUSTICE OF THE PEACE BOOK.

Communicated by MARY WASHBURN PARKINSON, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

It was not only in their Bibles that our ancestors wrote family notes of interest to their descendants. The precious blank sheets of paper in whatever book lay at hand were often used for this purpose. Mr. Charles Hopkins Washburn, brother of the writer, owns an old book of laws for the use of a Justice of the Peace, which he values from the fact that it contains items regarding his family, in the handwriting of five generations, including his own. As the first writer, on the page shown in the illustration, mentions three generations of his forefathers, the old book contains records of eight generations of this line of Washburns.

The title page of the book is as follows :—

AN ABRIDGEMENT OF BURN'S JUSTICE of the PEACE AND PARISH OFFICER.

TO WHICH IS ADDED, AN APPENDIX, CONTAIN-ING Some general rules and directions to be known and observed by all Justices of the Peace.

BOSTON: Printed for, and sold by JOSEPH GREEN-LEAF, at his PRINTING OFFICE in HANOVER-
STREET, near CONCERT HALL. M,DCC,LXXIII.

The first owner of the book was Col. Seth Washburn, of Leicester, Mass. Besides other positions of trust in Leicester, he held that of Justice of the Peace. This book was quite likely his whole law library. In it, on the blank page after the preface, he recorded the following marriage :—

Worcester ss January 31th 1788 than Bezaleal Phelps from — the state of Rhode Island and Lucia Henderson of Leicester Entered into the solemn covenant of marriage by marrying them Saleves before me and desired me to record the same.

Seth Washburn, Justis a peace.

Possibly it was this recorded marriage that first moved him to put to some use the other blank pages, so turning the book upside down he wrote inside the last cover:—

The account from Britain is that they lose 100,000 lives in the war with America and one hundred and forty million of money —

On the page opposite is written:—

Wee was married April 12th 1750.

Seth was born February 1st 1751 the babe that died was born December 30

Joseph was born —

But this is broken off. It evidently occurred to him to begin with an account of his forefathers. Turning back to the page opposite the last printed page, he wrote:—

My great grandfather was one of the first Settlers in New England his name was John Washbourn he had two brothers came over with him one of their names was Philip and one Settled in York State but I don't know his name.

My great grandfather had Seven Sons viz Joseph Samuel Thomas John Bengamon Jonathan and James My grandfather's name was Joseph he had Seven Sons viz Jonathan Joseph Ebenezer Miles Ephraim Edward and Benjamin my father's name was Joseph he had five Sons four that lived to grow up viz Elijah Joseph Seth and Ebenezer I had three that lived to grow up viz Seth Joseph and Asa Seth died in the army in the year 1776 at York Island he had two Sons viz Nathaniel and Seth Nathaniel died young my brother Elijah had three Sons Samuel Elijah and Joseph brother Joseph had but one Son his name is Joseph brother Ebenezer had three Artamos Ebenezer and Syras my son Joseph has 2 Sons Davis and Seth *and two more viz Joseph and Amory Asa has 3 Sons Ruben Levi and Seth *and Asa and Jacob Levi died December 12 1792.

Turning again to the front of the book, Seth Washburn set down his own family record opposite the title page, upside

Across the page is written by Seth Washburn :—

I was born May 19th 1723. My wife was born December 19th 1728 my last wife was born May 3 1733

When Seth Washburn died in 1794, the book became the property of his son Asa, and was taken to Putney, Vt. Asa wrote after his father's death :—

My Honored Father Seth Washburn Departed this life February 12, 1794. My mother in law died September 1801.

After this in the handwriting of Reuben, son of Asa, is the following :—

The above is the Family Record of Seth Washburn of Leicester, Worcester County, Mass, made in his own hand writing up to the time of his death, February 12th 1794, and after his death, there are some minutes in said Record made by his son Asa Washburn, and after his death some, made by his Grandson Reuben Washburn. The said Seth Washburn was born at Bridgewater Mass. May 19th 1723, and settled in Leicester, and there, April 12th 1750, married Mary Harwood, Who was born at Lunenburg Mass. December 19th 1728.

Reuben Washburn.

After the title page Asa Washburn gives his own family record (the deaths under the lines inserted by his son Reuben).

I was born July 25th 1757.

My wife was born December 13 1758

We was married November 16 — 1780

My dear Wife died Sept. 11th 1804, about half after eight o'clock in the morning in the 46 year of her age.

Persis Boutell my present wife was born March 29th 1760

We was married Sept. 26th 1805 and died June 1837.

The last date is in the handwriting of Reuben Washburn, also the following :—

The above is the Family Record of Asa Washburn of Putney, Windham County, Vt., made in his own handwriting up to the time of his death, october 6th 1834; and after his death there are some minutes in said Record, made by his son, Reuben Washburn. The said Asa Washburn was born at Leicester July 25th 1757; and, November 16th 1780, married Sally Upham of Spencer, Mass. who was born at Spencer December 13th 1758. The said Asa Washburn emigrated from Leicester to Putney in March 1785.

Reuben Washburn.

Opposite the first page of the book Reuben Washburn recorded his marriage with Hannah Blaney Thacher, at Malden, Mass., October 10th, 1813, and dates of birth of five children. The first born was Peter Thacher, who finds space, after what his father had written concerning Col. Seth Washburn, to write the following:—

My father, Reuben Washburn, gave this book to me, March 29 1860. It contains the handwriting of my great grandfather Seth Washburn, of my grand father, Asa Washburn, and of my father Reuben Washburn.

Peter Thacher Washburn.

The present owner of the book, the son of Peter Thacher Washburn, has written a few words indicating possession, the four generations of his fathers having left little available space.

Seth Washburn was a soldier in the Revolution, fighting at Bunker Hill, a captain in the eight month service of 1775, afterwards a member of the General Court of Massachusetts thirteen years in succession, 1776-1788, part of the time as Representative from the town of Leicester, and part of the time as Senator from the County of Worcester. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention of Massachusetts, 1779, and colonel of a regiment of militia after the Revolutionary War. Governor Emory Washburn's "History of Leicester" gives an interesting account of Seth Washburn's part in the Battle of Bunker Hill, and his march on April 19, 1775, as captain of the Leicester Minute Men.

Mitchell, in his history of Bridgewater, leaves in doubt which of several Joseph Washburns went from Bridgewater to Leicester to live. The jottings regarding his father's family, which Seth Washburn put down in the old Justice of the Peace book, settle this point.

The Joseph Washburn who went to Leicester was the Joseph whose father had the seven sons, Jonathan, Joseph, Ebenezer, Miles, Ephraim, Edward, and Benjamin. Mitchell gives these seven sons, in different order, to the Joseph Washburn who married Hannah Latham, granddaughter of Mary (Chilton) Winslow. These sons were the grandsons of John Washburn, whom Seth Washburn speaks of as his "grate grand father."

John Washburn married Elizabeth Mitchell, granddaughter of Francis Cooke, the Pilgrim.

Thus the old book, from which these notes are taken, furnishes proof that the Leicester Washburns are within the fold of Mayflower Descendants.

THE VITAL RECORDS OF BRIDGEWATER, MASS.

Literally transcribed from the original records,

BY GEORGE ERNEST BOWMAN.

Bridgewater was originally a part of Duxbury, and was incorporated as a separate town 3 June 1656. The first town clerk was John Cary, who kept the records for twenty-five years. The first book of the records was used until 1702. It is in a very dilapidated condition, many entries being incomplete, or entirely lost. Scattered among the records of town meetings are found the records of births, marriages and deaths.

THE JOHN ROBINSON TABLET.

BY MORTON DEXTER.

On Friday, July 24, 1891, an event occurred in Leyden, Holland, of more than local or temporary interest. It was the unveiling and dedication of a bronze tablet in memory of Rev. John Robinson, pastor of the Pilgrim church founded in Scrooby, England, in 1606 or 1607, resident in Leyden from 1609 to 1620, emigrating then, by its minority, to America, but continuing in Leyden, by its majority, for some years longer, and perpetuated at present in Plymouth, Mass., by the Church of the Pilgrimage and the First Parish Church.

The tablet is on the outer wall of St. Peter's, the (Lutheran) cathedral church of Leyden, under which, in a grave which cannot be identified, Robinson was buried March 4, 1625. Just across the street, the Kloksteeg, is the site of the house in which Robinson lived and preached, and in the garden of which a score of smaller dwellings were built for other members of the Pilgrim company.

The tablet was erected under the auspices of the National Council of Congregational Churches of the United States. The original movers in the matter were the late Rev. Dr. Henry M. Dexter and Prof. George E. Day. At their instance the National Council, which met at Detroit in 1877, appointed a committee, of which they were members and Dr. Dexter chairman, to promote the object. But the execution of the project was delayed unavoidably for various reasons until 1891, when it was accomplished immediately after the end of the first International Congregational Council, held that summer in London. During the intervening years Dr. Dexter and others of the original committee died. As finally constituted, it included Prof. G. E. Day, ex-President S. C. Bartlett, Hon. E. W. Blatchford, Rev. Drs. J. K. McLean, C. R. Palmer, and W. A. Robinson, and Rev. Morton Dexter.

The tablet is seven feet high by six feet wide. It was cast by the Henry Bonnard Bronze Company, of New York. It was the largest, with a single exception, ever cast in one piece in America. At the top is the device of a vessel, under which are the words, "The Mayflower. 1620." Below is the following inscription, composed by Dr. Dexter:—

REV. JOHN ROBINSON, M.A.

PASTOR OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH WORSHIPING OVER AGAINST
THIS SPOT, A.D. 1609-1625, WHENCE AT HIS PROMPTING WENT FORTH

THE PILGRIM FATHERS

TO SETTLE NEW ENGLAND
IN 1620.

BURIED UNDER THIS HOUSE OF WORSHIP, 4 MAR. 1625
ÆT. XLIX YEARS.

IN MEMORIA AETERNA ERIT JUSTUS.

ERECTED BY THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A.D. 1891.

There is no authentic picture of the "Mayflower," and the device upon the tablet, which was selected, after much investigation, by Prof. J. F. Weir, of Yale University, represents a typical vessel of the period, of about the size and character of the famous Pilgrim ship. All the lettering upon the tablet is raised above its surface.

The total cost of the undertaking was less than $2,500. It was easily raised by contributions from individuals and Congregational churches, and, by consent of the contributors, an unexpected surplus afterwards was added to the building fund of the John Robinson Memorial Church in Gainsborough, England.

The dedication of the tablet was in charge of Messrs. Palmer and Dexter of the committee. But a number of other Americans were present, among them Rev. Drs. F. A. Noble, A. H.

Ross, T. T. Munger, and Burdett Hart, President W. F. Slocum, Hon. S. R. Thayer, United States Minister to Holland, and Messrs. Samuel Holmes and G. H. Whitcomb. British Congregationalists were represented by Rev. Drs. Alexander Mackennal and John Brown, Principal A. M. Fairbairn, Rev. G. S. Barrett, and Henry Spicer, Esq., from England, and Principal A. Gosman, Rev. Dr. Thomas Roseby, and Josiah Mullens, Esq., from Australia. Representatives of the municipality, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners and the University of Leyden, various religious bodies within the city and the military forces stationed there also were in attendance.

The exercises attracted general interest and a large company of citizens gathered. Early in the afternoon a procession was formed at the Hotel Lion d'Or and marched, headed by a military band, to St. Peter's Church. The tablet had been covered by canvas and a platform erected beneath it. Above the tablet rose three flag staffs, from which hung, ready to be hoisted, the American, Dutch, and English flags.

The exercises of dedication were simple but impressive. As the city clocks struck two Dr. Palmer called the assembly around the platform to order. The secretary and treasurer of the committee, Mr. Dexter, read a brief paper, giving the history of the undertaking, after which Dr. Mackennal offered prayer. Then followed the unveiling of the tablet. Miss Edith B. Palmer let fall the canvas which had concealed it and its appearance was welcomed by prolonged applause. She also hoisted the three flags successively, the band accompanying the raising of each by its own national air, "The Star-Spangled Banner," "Wien Neêrlandsch Bloed," and "God Save the Queen," respectively.

The procession then was formed again and entered the great church. As it moved forward the band played the appropriate air, "Integer Vitae," which was taken up and concluded by the organ within while the audience was seating itself.

The indoor exercises were opened by the singing of the late Dr. Leonard Bacon's Pilgrim hymn, beginning

"O God, beneath thy guiding hand
Our exiled fathers crossed the sea."

The memorial address was delivered by Dr. Palmer. It was a thoughtful, felicitous and eloquent study of the age in which John Robinson lived, of the special conditions out of which the Pilgrim enterprise grew, and of the history, character, writings, and influence of Robinson himself. From its many passages which deserve to be generally read several should be quoted here. In describing the times and the country of the Pilgrims Dr. Palmer spoke thus :—

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth the seeds of liberty which a divine enlightenment had been scattering broadcast in England for fifty years began to germinate, to take root and to grow. Nowhere can these seeds be discovered so readily as in the convictions of the advanced Puritans. Their watchword was reformation, but the real outcome of their conflict with repressive power was to be religious and political freedom for untold myriads. We are bound to remember this day the particular shape this conflict assumed. Hundreds and thousands of Christian people, in whose hearts there burned a passionate desire for a spiritual church and an unadulterated gospel, felt constrained to renounce the national church of England. They believed the further reformation of religion to be imperatively needful. Hopeless of seeing this effected within the national church—because the Episcopal party, who could promote it, would not, and the Puritan party, Presbyterian in its preferences, who would promote it, could not, and the two parties were in irreconcilable antagonism—they resolved upon “reformation without tarrying for any.” They separated themselves from the church by law established, and at the cost of everything which men hold dear, organized, by covenant with God and each other, what we know as Congregational churches, on what they conceived to be New Testament principles. Like other third parties, they were subject to ill will from both sides. They offended the party within the church which was zealous for further reformation no less than the opposite party who believed reformation had already gone too far. To go forth, therefore, was to challenge well-nigh universal execration. The step exposed them to be hunted as malefactors, to be persecuted, imprisoned, plundered, banished, executed. But forth they went, and the future vindicated their self-sacrifice and their faith. They became by the act the vanguard of advancing Christendom. Their heroic struggles, their unconquerable resolution in all this experience, make the period forever memorable. Nor did they struggle, dare and endure to no purpose. Posterity owes to them what it enjoys of religious liberty. Those Separatist communions were the pioneer free churches.

And of John Robinson himself he said :—

Upon his church, upon the community of Leyden, upon his generation, and through the Pilgrim Fathers upon the future of New England and of the United States, and even upon the England which had driven him from her shores but which he never ceased to love, John Robinson made an enduring, an indelible impression — an impression not rationally to be accounted for save in one way: it must have been the impress of a grand personality, grand in its moral, its intellectual, its spiritual resources. . . .

His most imposing virtue, perhaps, was his catholicity — his large tolerance. In this he outran his time. Dr. Bushnell declares him two whole centuries in advance of his age. . . . He was free from fanaticism. . . . If in the earlier years of his ministry he was led by the intensity of his convictions into any narrowness of view, it is apparent that every year led him further from everything of the kind, and that by force of the better reason he carried men with him into the enlargement he had experienced. And to him more than to any other man of his age is traceable that ultimate development of true liberality and charity toward all which is the glory of modern Congregationalism. . . . He was characterized by a profound and spiritual piety; an intense loyalty to Christ as in all things his Master and Lord; singular reverence for the Scriptures as the rule of faith and conduct; an unconquerable trustfulness, giving him courage, fortitude, and assurance of the future; strong religious affections and unfailing sympathies; an abhorrence of cant, pretense, and indirection; an exemplary walk and a scrupulous vigilance of himself; and his saintly spirit shone ever more brightly until the last. His decisive personal influence was largely founded in his conspicuous righteousness, fidelity, and disinterestedness.

One of his concluding passages also should be cited:—

And now at length we, descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers, proud of their blood and their faith, messengers of five thousand churches and of uncounted Christian citizens in the Great Republic, are here to call to remembrance his inestimable services to Truth, to Liberty, to Civilization, to Christ's Eternal Kingdom, and by this tablet, which we are now solemnly to dedicate, to perpetuate that remembrance to coming generations. Fitly it will stand here, a silent but eloquent memorial, telling to listening posterity its story of faith and patience, of fortitude and magnanimity, of heroism and triumph! Yet it will not be John Robinson's grandest monument. That is the Great Republic itself, spanning the Western Continent, rising conspicuous among the nations, cherishing the exalted consciousness that in its broad area, and in its intense life, civil and religious freedom far transcending the fathers' aspirations reigns universal, unassailable, enthroned in the hearts of ever-multiplying millions.

Although the address was delivered in English it held the close attention of the large company present.

Rev. F. A. Noble, D.D., then offered an appropriate prayer, after which Dr. Palmer formally completed the work of dedicating the tablet in these words:—

Now, therefore, WE, Samuel C. Bartlett, Eliphalet W. Blatchford, George E. Day, Morton Dexter, John K. McLean, Charles Ray Palmer, and William A. Robinson, by authority to us intrusted, IN THE NAME OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA — delegates from the Congregational Union of England and Wales and from the International Council of Congregational Churches lately assembled in London, together with representatives of Yale University, the University of Leyden, and Mansfield College in Oxford, present and assisting — do solemnly set apart and dedicate this Bronze Tablet, which we have erected, to the perpetuation of the venerable and sacred memory of the erudite scholar, the devoted minister, the saintly man, whose name it bears — JOHN ROBINSON, M.A., the pastor of the Pilgrim Church, the projector and spiritual father of the Plymouth Colony; and we declare this dedication duly and irrevocably accomplished. And for the grace vouchsafed to that blessed man, and to our forefathers, and to us their descendants and fellow servants — to God Almighty, the Father, the Son, the Holy Ghost, we give praise now and evermore! Amen.

He then formally transferred the tablet to the care of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners of the city of Leyden, a permanent body having charge of all such memorials within the municipality, in the following sentences: —

To the Honorable, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

GENTLEMEN, — This tablet, which we have brought from our far-away home and dedicated to the perpetual memory of John Robinson, we now take pleasure in committing to your honorable keeping. We heartily thank you for the gracious permission to erect it here. We thank you also for the kindly sympathy with us in our filial purpose, manifested by your presence with us to-day. To you, and to your successors forever, we now convey and deliver this memorial in which we feel so deeply interested, assured that our trust is by you cordially accepted and that it will be safe in your hands. Receive with it, gentlemen, assurances of the highest consideration on the part of ourselves and of the churches and institutions we have the honor to represent; and also of our best wishes and our prayers for the peace and progress of the churches of Leyden, and of all the churches of this ancient and honorable realm.

To these addresses several responses were made. Mr. E. van den Brandeler replied in behalf of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and Mr. E. M. De Laat de Kanter, the Burgomaster, in behalf of the city of Leyden, each expressing himself in Dutch. The eminent scholar and critic, Prof. A. Kuenen, D.D., also responded, first in Dutch and then in English, for the University of Leyden. Then Principal Fairbairn, of Mansfield College, Oxford, England, made a brief and eloquent closing address, after which the audience sang the well-known hymn by Mrs. Hemans beginning :—

“The breaking waves dashed high
On a stern and rock-bound coast,” and Dr. Palmer concluded the service with the benediction.

This bare outline of the proceedings gives little more than the merest suggestion of the surpassing interest of the occasion. It is eminently fitting that this magazine should contain some record of it. As a work of art the tablet is most creditable alike to its designers, to those who erected it, to the city of Leyden, and to the memory of John Robinson. It is one of the objects which all strangers in the city are careful to visit, and it is a becoming tribute to the man who not only was, more than any one else, the inspiration of the Pilgrim enterprise, but also was an intellectual and spiritual leader far in advance of his contemporaries, and whose reputation to-day is far greater than it was during his lifetime.

THE MAYFLOWER GENEALOGIES.

I. VITAL STATISTICS OF THE MAYFLOWER PASSENGERS.

Compiled from original sources,

BY GEORGE ERNEST BOWMAN.

Any compilation of the vital statistics of the Mayflower passengers must necessarily be very incomplete, owing to the loss of early records, but in many instances births, marriages or deaths may be shown to have occurred between two dates, and the Editor has spent a great deal of time in a critical examination and comparison of original records for the purpose of collecting facts which would assist in fixing as many such dates as possible. The results of this research have been arranged in alphabetical order for convenient reference. Lack of space forbids the insertion of the authority for each statement, but this will be given in the succeeding articles on the separate families.

All dates have been given in new style to prevent mistakes in celebrating anniversaries.

JOHN ALDEN. Born about 1599. Died at Duxbury, 22 September, 1687. He married, at Plymouth, before 1624, PRISCILLA² MULLINS (WILLIAM¹), who died after 1650.

ISAAC ALLERTON. Died at New Haven, Conn., before 22 February, 1659. He married, first, at Leyden, 4 November, 1611, MARY NORRIS, who died at Plymouth, 7 March, 1621. He married, second, at Plymouth, between July, 1623, and 1 June, 1627, Fear² Brewster (WILLIAM¹), who died at Plymouth in 1634. He married, third, before 1644, Joanna —, who survived him.

PILGRIM NOTES AND QUERIES.

NOTES.

PROPOSED REMOVAL OF MYLES STANDISH FROM DUXBURY. — The fact that Captain Standish was preparing, in 1653, to remove from Duxbury to Swansea seems to have escaped notice hitherto, and it will doubtless interest many to know that his plans so far progressed that he sold all of his real estate to Captain Thomas Willett, and the deed was recorded. Although no reason is stated for the agreement making the sale "of non effect," it is probably safe to assume that the troubles with the Dutch in 1653 and 1654, and with Ninigret, the Niantic Sachem, in 1655, caused a postponement of the removal until his advancing years, and possibly the beginnings of the disease which finally resulted in his death, brought about this change in his plans.

Annamoysett, commonly called Wannamoissett, became in 1668 the town of Swansea.

The sale is recorded in Plymouth Colony Deeds, Volume I, Part I, page 85.

These presents Witnesse that I have barganed and sould to captaine Thomas Willett my house and land with all my accomodation att Duxburrow to him and his heires for ever ; ffor and in consideration of one hundred pounds

PRISON CELLS UNDER GUILD-HALL, OLD BOSTON.

OLD BOSTON, ENGLAND.

BY EDWIN S. CRANDON.

On the east coast of England, on the banks of the river Witham just above its juncture with the bay called the Wash in the low lands, or fen country of the county of Lincoln, is ancient Boston — St. Botolph's Town, where the first minister of the Puritan colony at Trimountain labored for a generation as the Vicar of the Church of England parish, where the Pilgrim Fathers who settled Plymouth were imprisoned for a time prior to their escape to the Netherlands and where to-day the feet of the New England Bostonian turn lovingly, although a journey considerably off the main line of travel is involved thereby. And surely the attractions of old Boston are ample to compensate for the necessary change of route involved. Few travellers in England think of the old town as worthy the loss of a day from the celebrated "Cathedral route" albeit St. Botolph's Church is far more interesting as a sample of architecture, is far more interesting from historical associations, and is considerably larger than some of the cathedrals famed in travellers' story. The average traveller gets to Lincoln, the shire town of the county, and finds much to interest him there; in truth Lincoln is one of the most interesting towns in England, but to us of Massachusetts the old town in the south east of Lincolnshire, with its old and stately Church, its quaint streets and inns, its memories of the past in connection with the Reverend John Cotton, and most of all, its name must possess an interest far greater than mere oddity, or picturesqueness. Boston has these and to spare, but to us of the New England Boston, its attraction is subtler than the mere pleasure of gazing at old buildings or impressive ecclesiastical architecture. Perhaps the traveller is not to be blamed for ignoring Boston—even the New England traveller, for his Baedeker says that it is famous chiefly for having given its name to our Boston, and dismisses the town with barely twenty lines of description. From this the tourist easily might gain the impression that the English Boston possesses little of interest beyond its name, surely not enough to warrant the journey thither and the consequent interruption to a well defined itinerary.

Boston is 116 miles north of London and 35 miles due east from the centre of England, say not more than 150 miles from Liverpool, but the main line of the railway from London to the North passes to the west of Boston, which is reached from Lincoln by a branch and from Nottingham by another. The country thereabouts is decidedly low; in fact the local name until recently was Holland, which meant exactly what the same name means for one of the provinces of the Netherlands on the opposite side of the North Sea, namely, hollow land. Nowadays they call that section the Lincolnshire fens, and many have been the inundations, the high tides and destruction on the English side of the North Sea, unprotected from the ocean by dikes until many years after the Dutch had solved their infinitely harder problem of forcing a country from the sea. The country is not particularly interesting after one has seen some other parts of England, but it has the same beautifully green appearance; the roads are grand and run between hedges of singularly attractive beauty to the American traveller; many poplar trees give local color to the quiet landscape and rivers and canals wind through the country diversifying the view enough to prevent its becoming tedious. Boston is on both sides of the river Witham, a narrow stream where there is one bridge and a ferry. The latter simply is a small boat and you are rowed across in a few minutes for a half penny. Along the river-side are old streets and lanes, with inns the oldest I saw anywhere in that country of famous old taverns—inns that were entertaining man and beast and ringing with hearty good cheer years before the Three Hills on Massachusetts Bay ever echoed to the sound of the Puritan's axe or became the seat of wisdom so profound as fairly to entitle it to the proud appellation of the Hub of the Universe. Old buildings, too, greet the delighted novice from America; buildings whose bulging sides give evidence of their antiquity, of the old, half-timbered, projecting upper story kind which delight us so much in foreign photographs, and all of stone or brick, for wood is too precious in Europe generally for use in building.

Old Boston has a most honorable, albeit somewhat uneventful past. From the English view-point it is a slow old town, with little to distinguish it from many others of like size. To us, however, it is associated with Rev. John Cotton, the first Pastor of the Boston, New England, Church, for he was Vicar of St. Botolph's Church in the Lincolnshire Boston for many years. Again, Boston is associated indelibly with the Pilgrim Fathers of Plymouth, for in the guild hall were imprisoned the Scrooby Pilgrims, arrested in their first attempt to escape from England's persecuting King and Prelate. Striking indeed is it that history should have linked together the Pilgrim and the Puritan thus early in the great movement which ultimately settled New England, dethroned for a time both English King and Bishop and made for the triumphant vindication of the right of freedom of worship for the English race. While the Puritan Cotton was Vicar of the Church of England parish of St. Botolph in Boston, England, the Separatist, or dissenting Pilgrims, were imprisoned in the same city, and a quarter century later the same Cotton, persecuted in his turn was fain to fly to the same New England shores and to become, like them, a Separatist, and ultimately the two—Pilgrim and Puritan—blended into the New Englander and laid the foundations of our mighty Nation. In this connection it is suggestive certainly, that the Colonel of the Plymouth County regiment of Minute-Men which responded to the Lexington Alarm, 19 April, 1775, was Theophilus Cotton, a direct lineal descendant of the Puritan Vicar of Old Boston and the first Minister of the Puritan Church of the New Boston, to which was given the name of the town in England where he had labored long and well. The Pilgrim descendants went forth to battle from the Pilgrim Colony under the Puritan's descendant—they had become one people then, the people of Massachusetts, and distinctions of Pilgrim and Puritan had passed away. But there was a sharp difference in the early years of the seventeenth century. The Pilgrim was hounded out of England a generation before the Puritan had to go. Here in the New England the two types blended, the Puritan, or Low-Churchman of the English Church adopting the Pilgrim's Separatist or Independent principles of Church government and meanwhile absorbing the little Pilgrim colony into its own more virile and enduring State.

Some traditions identify Boston as known to the Romans, but beyond possibly having a fort thereabouts there is nothing of Roman origin susceptible of the least proof. The first historical notice is the following, from the Saxon Chronicle: "St. Botolph built a monastery here A.D. 654, destroyed by the Danes, A.D. 870." But this is controverted and the good saint himself seems to be almost traditional if not mythical. The best that I have been able to find about him is that he flourished about the middle of the seventh century, being of a noble family, of German descent, famous for learning and zeal. The name "Botolph" is Saxon, and means "Boat-help" or "Help-ship," hence he was the patron saint of sailors. He is said to have been given a place for the establishment of a monastery by King Ethelmund of the South Angles, but the kingship of Ethelmund over a South Anglian kingdom is matter of dispute and the whole episode is shrouded in historic gloom. St. Botolph probably existed about that time but to distinguish from the legends and traditions what is actual fact is beyond the power of to-day. In any event the story goes that the saint did not want to dispossess anybody in establishing his monastery and desired a wilderness which nobody else could use, which is why he was accommodated with the location known as "Icanhoe," now Boston. At that time the Lincolnshire fens or marshes must have been dreary and wild indeed and well suited to the humble saint's yearnings for solitude. "Icanhoe," Saxon, means "Ox-hill"; some have endeavored to trace a parallel in the name of Boston—"bos" being Latin for "ox" and thus carrying out the Saxon name, but beyond much doubt the name of Boston is a contraction of "Botolph's town," which was the name generally used in the middle ages, and the natural tendency of the English to clip names in pronunciation easily would make "Botolph's town" into "Bos-ton." The monastery was destroyed completely by the Danes in A.D. 870 and Boston does not reappear in English history for over two hundred years, or in the reign of William the Conqueror.

As to the Saint, all that we know is that his body was buried in his monastery and that at the Danish invasion his "relics were translated to the monastery at Ely and later to that at Thorney." William of Malmesbury says that St. Botolph's body lay in St. Edmund's monastery at Bury, and Weever is quoted: "It was usual with the monks of Bury when they wanted rain to carry about in procession a coffin with the bones of St. Botolph inclosed." The 16th of May was set for his memory and the Church of St. Botolph, Aldersgate, London, took his name in the reign of Edward III. Boston as a distinct town or centre of habitation cannot be identified prior to the twelfth century. It is not mentioned in the celebrated Domesday book and it is a fair inference that up to that time it never was a town or anything else but the traditional seat of St. Botolph's monastery in the wild, low, Lincolnshire fens. Probably in the Conqueror's reign, at the Domesday survey, the locality formed part of the town of Shirbeck, which parish indeed, nearly surrounded it at the beginning of the present century.

Under the Normans Boston fell to the earls of Richmond and became a place of considerable commercial importance prior to the reign of John, for in 1204 it paid a tax on merchants of £780, second only to that of London, with £836. This shows that Boston must have begun to rise into consequence shortly after the conquest. King John granted it a charter, dated 30 January, 1204, and in 1205 the men of Boston paid £100 to secure immunity from interference from sheriffs and the right to choose their own bailiffs. It was known generally at this time in legal documents as "The Town of St. Botolph." The Hanseatic merchants and those of Flanders carried on a very large and important traffic in Boston in the thirteenth century and its market and annual fairs thus early became celebrated. It was a walled town, but no part of the wall remains and only the names of streets — Bar-gate, Worm-gate and similar names — survive. The town sent members of Parliament from the reign of Henry VIII, when it was made a free borough. It had sent members to the Councils in the reign of Edward III, 1326–53, the names of four of whom are known. From the reign of Edward VI, 1552, to the present the list of Boston's M. P.'s is complete. The list of Mayors of Boston begins with Nicholas Robinson in 1545 and also is complete to date, with over 250 names. In 1698 one of William III's Dutch friends, Henry of Nassau, was created Viscount Boston in reward for conspicuous services under the Prince of Orange, but the title became extinct in 1754.

In 1281 the town suffered from a great fire, and in 1286 the fourth great flood overtook it. The low country and the nearness to the coast — the River Witham running into the Wash but a few miles below Boston — made it liable to high tides and to overflows, and throughout its history we see constant references to its exposed condition and to the efforts made to protect it, unavailing until comparatively modern times. In 1288, during the annual fair, a most important event in mediæval Boston, the town was sacked by a company of bandits or brigands, and as illustrative of the wealth of old Boston in those times the historian tells us that "streams of gold, silver and other metal, molten, ranne into the sea." It recovered speedily and became a great wool port, gave attention to the fisheries, became a great resort for Flemish and other merchants, and in 1336 a patent was issued for the protection of a great number of German merchants and fourteen ships coming to the fair of St. Botolph. In 1359 when Edward III prepared to invade France, of the eighty-two towns assessed in proportion to their trading importance, Boston stood twelfth. In 1467 came another great flood. We have a description of the town at the middle of the sixteenth century, which has come down from a chronicler of the time :

"Botolph's towne standeth hard on the river of Lindis (the Witham). The great and chiefest part of the towne is on the este side of the ryver, where is a faire market place and a crosse with a square towre. The chief parish church was St. John's where yet is a church for the towne. St. Botolph's was but a chapel to it, but now it is so risen and adorned that it is the chiefest of the towne and for a parish church the best and fairest of all Lincolnshire, and served so with singing, and that of cunning men, as no parish in all England. The society and brotherhood (be)longing to this church causeth this and much land (be)longeth (to) this society. The steeple being quadrata turris and a lanthorn on it, both very high and faire and a marke both by sea and land for all the quarters thereabout. There is a goodly fonte, whereof part is of white marble, or of stone very like to it. There be three colleges of Freeres (friars), gray, black and Augustine, also an hospital for poor men, and in the towne, or near to it, the late Lord Huse had a place with a stone tower. All the buildings of this side of the towne are fayre, and merchantes dwelle in it, and a staple for wool is used there. There is a bridge of wood to come over Lindis into this part of the towne, and a pile of stones set yn the middle of the ryver. The streame of it is sometymes as swift as it were an arrow. On the west side of Lindis is one long street and on the same side is the White Friars. The mayne se (sea) ys vi miles of Boston. Dyverse good shippes and other vessels ryde there."

Under Henry VIII the dissolution of the monasteries tended to reduce the importance and commercial prosperity of Boston, but Henry made amends by raising it to the rank of a free borough and by granting it several privileges under a charter 14 May, 1546, confirmed by Edward VI, 16 May, 1547, while Mary, 1554, endowed the corporation with lands to support the bridge and port, in a deplorable state at that time, also to establish and maintain a grammar school and for public worship. By the early years of the reign of Elizabeth the port nearly had gone to ruin, largely due to alterations in the river's mouth, but late in her reign means were taken to improve this. A violent tempest, 5 October, 1571, did immense damage, and in 1585 and again in 1603 visitations of the plague occurred. James I granted a charter 17 August, 1608, confirming former charters and endowing the corporation with new privileges and immunities. It was at this time that the Pilgrim Fathers, attempting to escape from Scrooby to the Netherlands, were imprisoned under the Boston Guild-Hall, or town hall, and soon after, in 1633, Rev. John Cotton, Vicar of St.

Botolph's, with some of the leading men of his parish, were forced by the antipathy and persecution of Archbishop Laud to leave the country, going to Winthrop's colony where they gave the name of Boston to the Puritan capital. Bradford says of the little Pilgrim company :

Although they could not stay yet were they not suffered to go, but the ports and havens were shut against them, so as they were fain to seek secret means of conveyance, and to fee the mariners and give extraordinary rates for their passages. And yet were they oftentimes betrayed, many of them, and both they and their goods intercepted and surprised, and thereby put to great trouble and charge. . . .

Bartlett, "The Pilgrim Fathers," says :

Of all the seaports on the eastern coast, the most convenient for Holland, and at that time the most important, was Boston, situated amidst the rich, level fens of Lincolnshire, intersected by ancient dykes formed by the Romans, and communicating with the sea by the sluggish river Witham. . . . To Boston the principal company of the emigrants turned their eyes and secretly hired a vessel to take them over to Holland. Brewster seems to lead the conduct of this business and of the arrangements relative to the embarkation. . . . Having reached Boston they found the Captain had not yet arrived and were compelled to remain in that town, sadly reducing their scanty funds, and exposed to the continual risk of discovery. At length the Captain made his appearance, but only to betray them. . . . They were carried into the town where they were made a spectacle to the multitude and at last "being by the catchpole officers rifled and stripped of their money, books and much other goods," they were carried before the magistrates and put into wards, and messengers were sent to inform the Lords of the Council of their capture and to inquire their pleasure concerning them.

Lincolnshire was the centre of the Puritan agitation. Douglas Campbell in his "Puritan in England, Holland and America," says :

The low districts about the Humber and the Wash, reclaimed from the ocean by the Hollanders, were always hot-beds of Nonconformity ; here was the original Boston ; near by was Cambridge, the home of Puritanism.

On the subject of the Pilgrims' imprisonment at Boston Dr. John Brown says :

The magistrates were not unfavorable to them, for Puritanism was too rife in Boston itself for them to think ill of those that went that way. When, a quarter of a century later nine hundred Puritan colonists sailed for Massachusetts with John Winthrop, many of the leading townsmen of Boston were among the number: Richard Bellingham, Recorder of the town from 1625 to 1633; Atherton Hough, Mayor of the borough in 1628 and Thomas Leverett, an Alderman. Thomas Dudley, second Governor of Massachusetts, made Boston, Lincolnshire, his residence at one time that he might listen to the preaching of the Reverend John Cotton. Bellingham also was Governor of Massachusetts later, and so was John Leverett.

Of the Pilgrims' treatment at Boston, Bradford says :

The magistrates used them courteously and showed them what favor they could, though they could not deliver them till order came from the Council table.

What the lords of the Council did is not known but after a month's imprisonment at Boston most of the Pilgrims were sent back to Scrooby or elsewhere in that vicinity. Brewster and six others were bound over to appear at the Assizes, but there are no records of what then occurred, and the failure to escape in the autumn of 1608 was followed by ultimate success in the following spring.

As to the name of our Boston and its being given in honor of John Cotton, authorities disagree. The tablet commemorating the restoration of the Chapel in St. Botolph's Church by New England Bostonians in 1855 asserts that this was the case, and certainly that idea is common. However, the Memorial History of Boston, New England, cites a memorandum to this effect: "At a Court held at Charlestown 7 September, 1630, it was ordered that Tri Mountain be called Boston" and this was three years before Cotton arrived. Governor Dudley says that it had been predetermined to name the settlement Boston, no matter where it should be made. So many of the prominent men of the Colony came from Boston and thereabouts and it was such a centre of Puritanism

I William Palmer of Ducksborrow Nayler being ill in body but of pfect memorie not knowing how nere I am to my death think good briefly to settle my estate, yet hope if God spare life to set downe thinges more perticulerly hereafter. In the meane tyme for the disposeing of my outward estate this is my will & Testament ffirst of all I ordaine my loveing frends m^r Willm Bradford m^r Edward Winslowe and m^r Thomas Prince my Execut^{rs}. Next of all whereas I have marryed a yeong weoman who is deare unto me I desire them to deale well wth her: but my desire is that my estate consisting of lands houseing goods chattells &c may be sould and turned into money, all but such of my mooveables as my Execut^{rs} aforesaid shall thinke meete to give her for her present comfort: next my estate being wholly sould as afore my desire is that my wife may not have lesse then one third thereof. And if in case shee be wth child Then that one other third of my estate be p^rserved and improved by my Execut^{rs} for that child as myne heire. And that if in case shee be not wth child Then I would have myne

Execut^{rs} as in conscience they are pswaded out of the re-maynder of my estate deale wth Rebecca my Grandchild and Moyses Rowly whom I love, but not so as to put it into their father or mothers hands but p^rserve it for them till they come to yeares of Discretion. Next my Debts being payd I would have myne Execute^s to give somewhat to Stephen Tracy and somewhat towards the meeting house at Plymouth, also I would have yeong Rowly to be placed wth m^r Partridge that hee might be brought up in the feare of God, and to that end if his father suffer it I give m^r Partridg five pounds. And if in case my sonne Henry or daughter Bridgitt be liveing if they Demaud it I give them fourty shillings a peece if they be liveing That this is my Deede witnes my hand & Seale the seaventh of Novemb^r 1637

THE FAMILY RECORDS OF NATHANIEL THOMPSON AND HIS SON REV. OTIS THOMPSON.

Communicated by MISS ABBY LOUISE ALLEN.

Four time-worn pages are all that remains to-day of what was once the bible in which Nathaniel and Otis Thompson wrote their family records.

Nathaniel Thompson, who was born in Middleborough, Mass., in 1750, and died there eighty-three years later, was the original owner of the book and the earliest entries are all in his handwriting. He and his wife Hannah Thomas were both fourth in descent from Mayflower passengers. Nathaniel was the son of Caleb Thomson, of Middleborough, Mass., and his wife Abigail Crossman. Caleb was the son of Jacob Thomson, of Barnstable, Mass., whose father John Thomson married Mary, the daughter of Francis Cooke. Hannah Thomas, Nathaniel Thompson's wife, was the daughter of Noah Thomas, of Middleborough, Mass., and of Mary Alden. This Mary Alden was the great-grand-daughter of John Alden, the connection being through his son Joseph and his grandson John.

The bible passed from Nathaniel's hands into the possession of his oldest child and only son, Rev. Otis Thompson, who wrote, after his father's entries, the records of his own family. Otis graduated from Brown University in 1798. He later studied Divinity. As a minister he is chiefly identified with the church in Rehoboth, Mass., of which he was the pastor for over a quarter of a century.

Sometime after his death, which occurred at Abington, Mass., in 1859, his daughter Mrs. Charlotte Wight (Thompson) Bachelor, of Rehoboth, Mass., became the possessor of the bible. Through long use it had become much dilapidated and, after the record pages were removed, it was no longer preserved. These four pages, however, which contain the records have been carefully treasured. They were given by Mrs. Bachelor to her daughter Mrs. James Nichols Frye, of Brookline, Mass., who is their present owner.

Mrs. Frye has kindly loaned them to the Massachusetts Society, that they may be published in THE MAYFLOWER DESCENDANT. The illustration which accompanies this article shows the page of birth records.

In the marriage records, which follow, the first entry only was made by Nathaniel Thompson; the others are in the handwriting of Otis.

MAYFLOWER PASSENGERS AND COAT-ARMOUR.

BY F. APTHORP FOSTER.

The fad for using armorial devices on letter paper, carriages and what not has become so much a matter of unreasoning custom that a word of protest should be entered against the wholesale assumption of arms by those having no claim to them.

Many years ago in Boston an artist by the name of Cole painted coats of arms for the unsuspecting and for those who wished a final touch to their respectability. His method was much the same as that employed by the so-called "heraldic painters," stationers and die-cutters nowadays. Guillim, Burke or some other list of arms-bearing families was searched for one of the same name as his customer. The arms found were declared to be his. If there were more than one family mentioned, a description of whose arms was given, no doubt the most artistic coat was chosen. Where no armigerous family of the customer's name was found, a coat was promptly concocted. The whole method was fraudulent and worthy of the strongest condemnation, though the heraldic painter or stationer can hardly be held blameworthy when the customer insists on making a willing dupe of himself.

• The age was not filled in.

Let us briefly consider who are entitled to coat-armour, if any one can be said to be so entitled in a country where class distinctions and privileges have no legal recognition. In forming our opinion we must be guided by the English laws on the subject, for from England if from anywhere came the right of our English-speaking ancestors to coats of arms.

Roughly speaking, those who have legal right to coat-armour are the descendants in the male line from an ancestor to whom the Heralds made a grant of arms, or from one who was confirmed as an armiger by them in one or other of their various Visitations.

Women could only use their father's arms (provided he were entitled to them) in a lozenge, without helmet, crest or motto. Children did not inherit the mother's arms unless she were an heiress and then they quartered them with their paternal coat.*

These rules are violated daily, sometimes wittingly, more generally from ignorance. A case in point, which came under my observation. A young lady found an old seal which had been in her family for many years. It was not known who had claimed the arms engraved on it or to whom they were supposed to have belonged. However, she adopted them, and had a die made of the crest with the initial of her family name beneath. She was remonstrated with for using arms that she had not a shadow of a claim to, and her excuse was that she liked them, they were very pretty and no one would be the wiser if she said nothing. This is merely one example in hundreds of the gratuitous appropriation and constant misuse of arms. Small wonder that the whole subject is thereby brought into ridicule and disrepute.

Now who, if any, of the Mayflower passengers were rightfully possessed of coats of arms which their male descendants are today fairly entitled to by the rules mentioned in a previous paragraph? The answer based upon present knowledge is a short one — none.

A halo of sacredness has so long surrounded those worthy men and women who braved all for their conscience's sake, that it is with a feeling akin to desperation that one speaks of them in other than glowing superlatives, yet from a heraldic standpoint it should be borne in mind that, with Edward Winslow and Captain Myles Standish as exceptions, the Mayflower people were made up of yeomen and indentured servants. This fact of station alone disposes of the right of these two classes to coat-armour. Arms were an attribute of quality and distinction. Hunter, in his Founders of New-Plymouth, (p. 106,) says in this regard: "The yeomanry of England in the reign of Elizabeth formed the class next to those who were the acknowledged gentry using coat-armour of right."

Winslow's father was designated "esquire" * and very possibly the family was armigerous, but at present definite knowledge on the subject is lacking. The Governor used arms on his seal, but his right to do so has never been satisfactorily settled and cannot be until his descent from a recognized armigerous ancestor has been proved beyond doubt. Standish is the only other of the Mayflower passengers whom circumstantial evidence would place as one of the gentry. He claimed in his will to be of the Standishes of Standish and entitled to lands in England through a great-grandfather who was a younger son of that house. Diligent search has failed wholly to verify his statements, and with proof lacking to show who his English ancestors were, any claim to arms through him must be thrown aside.

In 1891 Mr. William S. Appleton published a list in the New England Historic-Genealogical Register † of "Positive Pedigrees and Authorized Arms." ‡ This has been followed by a supplementary list § bringing the number of names up to

* Pope, Pioneers of Massachusetts. † Vol. xlv. 187.

‡ The full sub-title is "Or an attempt at a List of Settlers named in Savage's Genealogical Dictionary of New England, whose Ancestors are recorded in the Heraldic Visitations of England, and whose Descendants are probably living in the United States of America."

§ Register, Vol. lii. 185.

thirty-two. Proof in each case was indisputable, and no claim was admitted without the most careful scrutiny. Neither in these lists, nor in a manuscript list of some additional settlers likely to have been armigerous, but for whose use of arms there was insufficient proof to justify printing their names, does Mr. Appleton mention any Mayflower passenger. To those who know the care with which Mr. Appleton's work was done, this in itself is sufficient proof that neither Winslow, Standish nor their fellow voyagers can be considered armigers.

THE INVENTORY OF SAMUEL² EATON (FRANCIS¹) AND THE SETTLEMENT OF HIS ESTATE

Transcribed from the Original Records,

BY GEORGE ERNEST BOWMAN.

The record of the settlement of the estate of Samuel² Eaton (Francis¹) of Middleboro, which is found in the Plymouth Colony Wills and Inventories, Volume IV, Part I, page 83, is most unsatisfactory, since the meagre facts it contains serve only to show that there are probably many descendants of Francis Eaton whose connection has never been suspected and may always remain unknown.

Samuel Eaton married, first, before 1647, Elizabeth —, who was living 5 (15) October, 1652, and Bradford's History states that she had one child living in 1651. She died before 1661, for Samuel married, second, on 10 (20) January, 1660-61, Martha³ Billington (Francis², John¹), who survived him.

The record shows that the first wife must have had at least two daughters who had married and had children living when the estate was settled, and that at least one of these daughters was dead. No other construction can be put upon the statement "and the Children of the first wife to have the sume of twenty shillings a peece & such of them as are Dead the sume to be payed amonge theire Children."

The record also proves that the surviving children by the second wife were a son and three unmarried daughters, the daughters all under age. The "Daughter provided for by her Grand father" must have been the one named in the deed dated 3(13) January 1663-64, in which Francis Billington conveyed land at Middleborough to Samuel and Martha Eaton (calling them his son-in-law and daughter) for their lifetime and then to their daughter Sarah.

DEPOSITIONS.

[Plym. Col. Wills III: I: 40]

The Testimony of Anna Little aged sixty yeares or therabouts saith that coming to visite Ralph Chapman a little before his will was made; and his Daughter was ffeeding of him; said this Deponant why Doe you feed him; his Daughter answered hee Can not feed himselfe: his hands are soe swelled; and shee being faine to Cutt his victualls into smale peeces put it into his mouth which I stranged att; shee uncovering his hands I saw they were swelled like bladders to my amazment; This said Deponant further saith that sometime after shee Coming thither to visitt him againe; they were swelled soe That his Daughter was faine to put his Tobacco pipe to his mouth and returne it againe as hee would; for I saw hee could not; as I Judge Doe it; and this Deponant further saith not;

Taken in the Court this sixt of June 1672 attested p^r me
Nathaniel: Morton Secretary

The preceding deposition, which shows that Anna (Warren) Little was born about 1612, was made in connection with the probating of the will of Ralph Chapman of Marshfield, to show why he could not sign and seal it. Other depositions to the same effect were made by William Ford, Sr. (who drew up the will), "aged 67 or therabouts"; by Thomas Tilden, "aged about fifty yeares"; and by Ephraim Little, "aged 22 yeares or therabouts."

[Plym. Col. Deeds, II: II: 56]

The 15th of october 1661
Nathaniell Warren aged thirty seaven yeares or therabouts being Deposed saith that hee was Desired by Samuell Ryder to goe to the house of Thomas Morton; sometime about the beginning of Aprill last past before the Date hecroff; To talke with Robert Ransome about some land hee had sold him att Man-nomett ponds; and after some Debate about it; The said

Robert Ransome Did Release the said land unto The said Samuell Ryder againe; on Condition that the said Samuell Ryder should pay the sume of three pounds and ten shillings to mee the said Nathaniell Warren for him the said Robert Ransome; and further saith not;

The oath of Nathaniell Warren taken before mee Thomas Southworth Assistant the Day & yeare abovewritten

On 20 March, 1660-61, Samuel Ryder, jr., of Plymouth, cooper, sold to Robert Ransome, of Plymouth, planter, his house and twenty-five acres of upland at Manomet Ponds, near Thomas Clarke's farm, also one acre of meadow at Little's meadow. The deed of this land, the foregoing deposition, and another of the same tenor and date made by William Clarke, "aged twenty seven yeares or therabouts," are all recorded on the same page. This deposition and the fact that his mother came in the Anne in the latter part of July, 1623, show that Nathaniel² Warren (Richard¹) was born in 1624, or possibly very early in 1625.

REPORTS FROM STATE SOCIETIES.

MASSACHUSETTS SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Society was held at the Hotel Vendome, Boston, on Friday afternoon, May 4, 1900. Mr. George C. Burgess read a paper on "John Billington, A Plymouth Pilgrim." Miss Caroline Eaton Densmore and Mr. Albert Adams Densmore sang several selections, and the usual informal reception followed. About one hundred and seventy members and their friends were present.

On Saturday, June 2, 1900, a party of seventy-five members and their friends made a pilgrimage to Duxbury, and visited the Alden House; Powder Point, where George Soule lived; the Ezra Weston house; the Standish Monument; the old cemetery where Standish is said to have been buried, and other points of interest.

PILGRIM NOTES AND QUERIES.

NOTES.

THE SECOND GENERAL CONGRESS of the General Society of Mayflower Descendants will be held at the Pilgrim Memorial Church, Plymouth, Massachusetts, on Saturday, September 15, 1900, at eleven o'clock in the morning. The two hundred and eightieth anniversary of the sailing of the Mayflower from Plymouth, England, falls on Sunday the sixteenth.

THE MAYFLOWER GENEALOGIES. As has been stated in an earlier issue, the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants is compiling the genealogies of all the Mayflower families. We are now able to announce more definitely the plans for carrying on this work and publishing the results. The entire work is under the supervision of the Editor of this magazine, who is giving his personal attention to every detail concerning the early generations. Every statement made will be verified by a critical study of the original records. This method of research requires a great deal of time, and progress must necessarily be very slow unless the Colonial Research Fund, mentioned elsewhere, receives liberal contributions.

A large amount of material has already been accumulated, consisting of transcripts of town, probate and land records, abstracts of court records and other ancient documents, and statements contained in such contemporary writings as Bradford's History, Mourt's Relation, Morton's New England's Memorial. All transcripts and abstracts are made directly from the original documents, or from literal copies of the same which have been made by persons competent to decipher the difficult chirography of the ancient records. This rule will be adhered to in all the work of the Society.

The demand for reliable data concerning the early generations is so great it has been decided to publish, as rapidly as they can be prepared, a preliminary outline of each of the twenty-three Mayflower families. These outlines will be published in THE MAYFLOWER DESCENDANT and will cover three generations, or four if the necessary data can be readily obtained. They will contain all descendants, in all female as well as male lines, whose descent has been verified by the records. All data concerning later generations will be arranged in proper order for publication later.

Three generations of the Warren family will be given in the October number, and it is hoped that each succeeding number will contain the early generations of at least one family. As the material accumulates it is probable that we shall be able to publish more than one family at a time.

As the work progresses a great amount of material will be accumulated relating to the families which reached Plymouth in the Fortune, the Anne and the Little James. This will be arranged and published as there is opportunity.

COLONIAL RESEARCH FUND. This fund is designed to provide the means for carrying on the work of compiling the Mayflower Genealogies. If the Committee on Historical Research were able to employ several competent assistants the work could be completed in very much less time than will be required as it is now being done, with only one assistant. Every person interested in Pilgrim genealogy and history is urged to make a contribution to the fund, and thus hasten the completion of the Genealogies. Subscriptions should be sent to the Editor, who will return a receipt and acknowledge them also in this department.

FOREIGN RESEARCH FUND. Subscriptions received: Mrs. Henry Veazey Ward, $5; Mrs. Frederick L. Merrick, $5.

QUERIES.

[This department is strictly limited to subjects connected with Mayflower genealogy and history, and queries can be inserted for subscribers only. Answers should be sent to the Editor for publication in later issues.]

26. TILDEN — RIDER — WATERMAN. Who were the parents of Lydia Tilden of Plymouth, who married at Taunton, 14 June 1680, Samuel⁴ Rider (Rebecca³ Bartlett, Mary² Warren, Richard¹) of Plymouth? In his will, Samuel mentions a legacy given to his son Joseph⁵ by his (Joseph's) uncle, and Joseph Waterman's will contains a legacy to Joseph Rider "my sisters son." How were Joseph Waterman and Lydia (Tilden) Rider brother and sister? Was Lydia a young widow when she married Samuel Rider, or was her mother married twice?

A. B. T.

27. COVEL — BARTLETT. Who were the parents of Cecilia, the third wife of Benjamin³ Bartlett (Mary² Warren, Richard¹)? In his will, dated 21 August, 1691, Benjamin gives forty shillings to Sarah Covell and directs "that my Wife her Aunt shall receive and dispose of it for her." Was Sarah a daughter of a brother, or of a married sister of Cecilia?

28. BARTLETT — IVEY. Mercy³ Bartlett (Mary² Warren, Richard¹) married at Plymouth, 25 December, 1668, John Ivey of Boston. What was his parentage, and were there any children? Was this man the same person as "John Ive" mentioned in Sewall's Diary as dying from exposure 13 July, 1698? W. R. I.

29. HARLOW. Samuel⁴ Harlow (Rebecca³ Bartlett, Mary² Warren, Richard¹) married first, before 1679, Priscilla —. He married second, before 1685, Hannah —. What were the maiden names of these two wives, and what was their ancestry? D. L. H.

30. COOKE. Who were the parents of Jane, the wife of Caleb³ Cooke (Jacob,² Francis¹)? They were probably married about 1681.

F. L. P.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

22. CHANDLER — THOMPSON. Rachel (Chandler) Thompson was the daughter of Josiah and Rachel (Magoun) Chandler, of Plympton, who were married there by Rev. Jonathan Parker, 14 November, 1771. Rachel Magoun was the daughter of David Magoun of Plympton. [Plympton Records.] — ELISABETH PENN HAMMOND.

BOOK NOTES.

First Congregational Church of Preston, Connecticut, 1698-1898, together with Statistics of the Church taken from the Church Records. Published by the Society [Rev. Richard H. Gidman, Pastor], 1900. 8vo. pp. viii + 201. Price, $2. For sale by Miss Mary E. Morse, Preston City, Conn.

The first one hundred and twenty-five pages of this attractively printed volume are devoted to the various addresses delivered at the Bi-centennial Celebration of the Church, held November 16, 1898, and brief biographical sketches, prepared by Amos A. Browning, Esq., of the twelve original members, viz., Thomas Park, Thomas Tracy, John Richards, Hopedill Tyler, Jonathan Tracy, Samuel Leonard, Robert Park, John Park, Caleb Fobes, Joseph Morgan, Ebenezer Witter and John Welch.

The remainder of the volume is given over to the statistics of the church, comprising a full record of admissions and baptisms, the marriages from 1744 to 1781, 1789 to 1798, and 1812 to 1847, and many deaths and dismissions.

A very valuable addition is hereby made to the growing list of printed church records. It is unfortunate, however, that the contents have not been made more readily accessible to historical students by the addition of a full name index.

THE MAYFLOW

SCROOBY MANOR-HOUSE.

THE MAYFLOWER DESCENDANT

Vol. II.

OCTOBER, 1900.

No. 4.

IN AND ABOUT SCROOBY.

BY MORTON DEXTER.

Scrooby has become a sort of Mecca for all interested in Pilgrim history. More and more the number of its visitors increases. Some are lineal descendants of the men and women who have made the little hamlet famous. More look back to them as ecclesiastical and spiritual ancestors. Many others are drawn thither merely by that general interest which thoughtful people feel in any spot which has been a rallying point of vital forces in history.

Scrooby well rewards its visitor. It is unpretending, even more modest now in the days of its fame than it was three hundred years ago when the manor-house had not parted with its stateliness and when the voices of men eminent in Church and State used to awake its echoes. It is not picturesque. But its associations and memories cause the sensitive spirit to thrill.

Yet it is not without a real external charm. He must be phlegmatic indeed who is not impressed by the serene tranquillity of its peaceful meadows and lazy streams; the fresh, rich coloring of its banks and hedges, its nearer copses and remoter woodlands; and the gracefulness of its old church-spire and the cosiness of its cluster of red-roofed houses. It is beautiful in its own quiet way. It has that peculiar loveliness which characterizes rural scenery in England, and which, although no more delightful than that of many of our own similar landscapes, is different. Yet, as I have said, its special attractiveness is historical, and the visitor usually goes there to see certain distinct features of the village and the region.

Just where is Scrooby? It is so tiny that your map may not exhibit it. Then measure off a line of fifteen miles about due west from Gainsborough and another about ten miles due south from Doncaster and their point of intersection will be where Scrooby lies. You probably will approach it from either north or south and by the Great Northern Railroad. But, although it has a little station, very few trains stop there and you will do better to leave the cars at Bawtry, a mile and a half to the north. There make your headquarters at the Crown Inn. The host is used to American visitors, and a considerable experience enables me to certify that a large measure of modest but genuine comfort may be enjoyed under his roof. It is well worth while to remain for several days and explore the vicinity.

Bawtry is in Yorkshire. Scrooby, although so near, lies in Nottinghamshire, and a corner of Lincolnshire wedges itself in between the others, so that you may walk in three counties within a few moments, if you like. A mile and a half nearly north of Bawtry is Austerfield, the birthplace of William Bradford. A long mile northwest from the Crown Inn, and in Harworth parish, lies the large "Martin" farm, the remainder of the wide estate once owned by the Morton family, an ancient and honorable house which has furnished, in its descendants, at least one governor and one chief-justice of the Supreme Court to Massachusetts.

Two miles or so west of Bawtry is Harworth village—not that of the Brontë family—and beyond that at some distance lie Tickhill, with its ruined castle, and Rotherham. Babworth and Sutton are more to the south and over towards the east rises Gringley-on-the-hill, worth a visit for the charm of the drive thither and of the view from the summit. And all around Bawtry and Scrooby, as a centre, stretch smooth meadows dotted with grazing cattle and scattered elms or thickets of trees, with the Ryton and the Idle winding sluggishly into the distance, and with the line of the railroad in view here or there to remind one that this is the nineteenth century instead of the seventeenth.

In Bawtry itself, although Pilgrim eyes must have looked upon it daily and Pilgrim feet must have trodden its streets and lanes, there is little to recall them directly. The parish church, instead of standing prominently upon the public square, is down by the river and is a squat edifice with a square tower, having little beauty and no special historic associations. Much more interesting, although it has been "restored" out of whatever antique beauty it may have had, is the old Morton Chapel, which, although close to the houses of Bawtry, really is just over the line in Harworth. Three hundred years or more ago the Mortons, then Roman Catholics, built and endowed this chapel, and also, just across the road, two or three little cottages as refuges for poor old women. It is pleasant to know that the pious purposes of the founders have not failed to be fulfilled by their Protestant successors. Worship still is held regularly in the church, which has become a "chapel-of-ease" of the Bawtry parish church, and you may still see old women in the cottages who owe their enjoyment of homes, instead of becoming inmates of some great county asylum, to the beneficence of the past.

Bawtry Hall, naturally the residence of the lord of the manor, at present the Earl of Crewe, is within a stone's throw but is not occupied by him, as he prefers another home. It is a plain but dignified building, in pleasant grounds but invisible from the neighboring roads.

It is an enjoyable walk down to Scrooby. After passing the long front of the Bawtry Hall estate on the west and a stretch of meadows or wheat fields on the east, with scarlet poppies growing in brilliant profusion among the wheat, you find yourself on the brow of a slight descent. In front the land is thick with gorse and wild flowers. The road divides before you. The right hand branch is the turnpike continued. The left hand is a lane, hardly more than a cart-path. Each leads you in a few moments to Scrooby, the roofs and spire of which you can see among trees not far away. The former skirts the western edge of the hamlet. The latter winds through the meadows, over the Ryton, and beside the village mill into the middle of the settlement.

There are perhaps thirty houses in all, small and unpretentious but neat and comfortable, with white-curtained windows and an abundance of bright flowers. Their roofs are thatched or red-tiled. Tall elms shade some of them and the whole place looks well cared for and home-like. Passing the mill and continuing south for perhaps three minutes, at the crossing of two little roads you see the graveyard, from the middle of which rises the church, known as St. Wilfred's. Its pointed spire is well proportioned and graceful and has remained unchanged since the days of the Pilgrims. The church is peculiar in shape. Having proved at one time too small to accommodate the congregation, which draws its members from a considerable surrounding territory, it was enlarged by adding an aisle to its south side. As you stand in front of the spire, therefore, the south side of the church is of about twice the width of the north side. This alteration has been made during the present century and the interior of the edifice also has been changed considerably. But there are in the chancel some venerable pewbacks of oak, blackened by time, which bear simple yet graceful carvings of a grape-vine and its fruit which are just as they were when Brewster used to worship there Sunday by Sunday.

It is worth your while to sit down for a few moments in the church, or in the sunny graveyard, and let your fancy have free play. Picture to yourself the days of the Cavaliers and the Roundheads, and those earlier days when Elizabeth was queen, when Shakespeare was writing and acting his plays, when the Spanish Armada was a fact of yesterday, and when the Pilgrims one by one were deciding that they must separate from the corruptions of the State Church at no matter how great a cost. You can almost see these little lanes repeopled by men in doublets and hose with peaked hats and with swords at their sides as they pass from house to house, or chat by the roadside, or walk between the ancient graves and enter the church to worship. These very stones before you were there just where they are to-day. Could they but speak, what stories they could tell!

But we are lingering too long at the church. Let us pass to that which has much greater interest, the so-called manor-house. Walk back towards the mill and turn to the right, that is, towards the east, into the short lane, which you cannot miss, and enter through the gate at its end. We are in a meadow containing several acres. Its southern boundary is another lane leading from the village to the tiny railway station. Opposite to us the railway forms the eastern line of the estate. Some hundreds of feet away on our left stands an irregular row of buildings with a garden, a farm-yard and many trees, and behind them runs the narrow Ryton, which bounds the place on the north. Four or five tall Lombardy poplars rise among the fruit trees and are visible from a long distance. A few trees also are scattered about the meadow.

This area is far from comprehending the whole of the ancient estate. It merely includes the site of the manor-house and its immediate grounds. Notice this shallow ditch extending part way from the gate to the lane on the south. It also runs along the lane and is believed to reveal the line of the former moat. Notice, too, the uneven surface of the meadow. Here is a circular mound, hardly rising above the average level, yet plainly evident. There is an oblong hollow, some thirty feet square. All about are irregularities indicating a connection and plan in the long ago. During my earliest visit in 1871, I was allowed by the courtesy of the late Lord Houghton, then lord of the manor, to make borings and excavations freely. These revealed almost everywhere beneath the turf a mass of crumbled brick work, which once had formed the wall of the original manor-house. But to determine the plan of the foundation — if, indeed, that be possible — there must be systematic and thorough excavation of the larger part of the present estate. The probability of learning enough to warrant the cost is very slight.

Fortunately there are records which tell us something. As the estate belonged to the Archbishopric of York, the official documents of the period occasionally allude to it. And the old historian Leland says that in 1541 it had a moat and two court-yards, the outer being about four times as large as the inner. Its front, he adds, was of brick and the remainder of "tymbre." It had a large hall or chapel, and probably both. It appears to have been square or oblong, with its open interior divided into two parts, the courts, by a cross row of rooms. The structure was surrounded by gardens containing fish ponds, the whole being encompassed by the river and the moat. It must have been stately and handsome.

It was a convenient resting-place on the tedious journey from London to York and Edinburgh, and Queen Margaret of Scotland, Henry VIII, James I, and Cardinal Wolsey were among the eminent visitors whom it sheltered from time to time.

James I, and, it is said, Queen Elizabeth, tried to buy it, but in vain. But, probably about the middle of the seventeenth century, it proved too costly to be properly kept up and most of it was torn down. But it was not wholly demolished, as we shall see. The short wall, extending from the present house back to the edge of the Ryton, used to contain stones evidently once portions of chiselled cornices or columns, and the roof of one of the present cow-sheds is supported by carved beams which probably did the same work formerly in the hall or chapel, and must have echoed the voices of Brewster and his fellow Pilgrims when they organized their historic church and planned their escape to Holland.

To-day you see, as you walk from the gate along the cart-path towards the buildings, what at first looks like an ordinary English farmhouse. It has two stories and an attic, is long and narrow, and extends north and south almost from the bank of the Ryton to the meadow. Its walls are partly of brick and partly of rubble or rough plaster. On the east side the roof of the southern half slopes down over a little shed and several minor out-buildings stand near by. On its west side lies a small flower and fruit garden, beyond which are barns, sheds, a dove-cote and numerous trees, including the conspicuous Lombardy poplars.

What is there in this modest building to justify the belief that any part of it was included in the dignified manor-house of our fathers' time? Stand in the garden and look up at the house and you will see. Observe the wide arch sunken in the southern half of the western wall on its outside. Notice, too, the deep niche at the left of the upper part of the arch. They have no modern significance and they testify to the great age of that portion of the wall. Now enter the house, where the courteous tenants will make you welcome, and examine the windows. Note the thickness of the wall. Nobody builds such walls now. But they used to build them in the sixteenth century. Pass up the steep and narrow stairway and examine the upper rooms. Study especially — you will need a candle in the windowless room, itself a weighty proof of antiquity — the arch which has been filled up and the neighboring niche in the wall of the inner room. If that arch were not the doorway into the ancient chapel, and the niche the place for the usual vessel of holy water in the Roman Catholic days not long past in our fathers' time, it is difficult to imagine what they can have been.

"Enough is as good as a feast" runs the old proverb. It would be pleasant to have more evidence that we of to-day actually can see and touch a part of the very building which so often sheltered the Pilgrims. But such evidence as we have, although scanty, is convincing. An important part of the present farmhouse was included in the manor-house where William Brewster lived. We must be on our guard, however, as we chat with the present occupants of the farm. They are well-meaning but know little of history, and most of their traditions have no value. They are unconscious that their barns and sheds are comparatively modern, and their tale of the use of the shed, in which are the carved beams, as a Pilgrim chapel and of hasty escapes out of one door as the government officers entered to make arrests by the other door on the same side is manifestly absurd.

Here, too, imagination can build a truer structure on the foundation of the few known facts than tradition can supply. It is easy to picture to one's self Brewster and Bradford and Robinson and Clyfton, with the little company of their associates, praying and singing, preaching and listening, planning and organizing, conversing and breaking bread together, enjoying thoroughly their precious fellowship, yet ever alert lest they be suddenly interrupted and arrested. Kings and queens, cardinals and archbishops had met and feasted within the same walls. But none were nobler than the humble Pilgrims, and none have left a record in human history like that which Brewster and his company began to make in that now almost vanished edifice.

Before you leave the Pilgrim region you must not fail to visit Austerfield also. A pleasant foot-path from Bawtry station leads you to the little village in a quarter of an hour or so. It is less prepossessing than Scrooby. Here the church, St. Helen's, is the object of special interest. It is small and low and has no spire or tower, but only a little pointed belfry, holding two bells which are more noisy than musical when rung. It stands well back from the village street on the right as you go north, but is easily found. On its south side is a quaint entrance porch, and its "zigzag and beak" carving with its rude likeness of a dragon, the rough stone benches within the porch, the heavy buttresses outside, the narrow, diamond-paned windows, and the old oaken chancel rail inside, probably are about as they were when, on March 19, 1589, the young child, William Bradford, the future friend of Brewster and the governor and historian of the Plymouth Colony, was baptized by Rev. Henry Fletcher.

This church, too, has been somewhat modernized within, and recently certain ancient arches have been discovered in its northern wall, and an attempt has been made to restore them, and, I believe, to rebuild a former north aisle into which they opened from the church. As to the success of this effort I am not yet informed. But I cannot help regretting it, because the earliest history of the church, so far as known, is unimportant. The only celebrity and the special interest of the edifice is due to William Bradford's connection with it, and to leave it as nearly as possible as it was in his boyhood would be far more appropriate than to restore its previous appearance, even if this could be done certainly and well.

A few minutes' walk still farther north brings one to the so-called Bradford Cottage. The tradition that the Bradfords occupied it is generally believed and may possess some probability, but has no more solid basis. It deserves a visit, however, because of the tradition and of its interesting cellar, which is asserted to have been a Pilgrim hiding-place. As such a cellar, in case of suspicion, would have been certain to be immediately searched, however, the tradition probably is baseless.

When you visit Scrooby and its vicinity, take time enough. You can see all which is most important in a few hours, and of course a hasty inspection is better than none. But it pays one richly to linger for a few days, or even weeks, long enough to see everything thoroughly and repeatedly, long enough to enter somewhat into the spirit of the locality and the rich meaning of its vital relations to human history. The life of a true descendant of the Mayflower men and women will have a fresh inspiration forever after a reverent visit to the early home of so many among them.

In the civil war Boston was a place of great importance. In the Parliamentary publications, under date 14 July, 1642, it is said: "Information was given that his Majesty intended putting garrisons in Lynn, Boston and other sea-towns, whereupon it was directed that a general order be drawn to oppose that illegal act." In 1643 Boston was one of the towns ordered by the king to contribute towards the illegal ship-money tax "one ship of 800 tons, 260 men at least, with double tackle, munition wages, and victuals." April 18, 1643, it was certified that Boston was very strongly fortified and sometime in that month the town passed under the Parliament's control. The two Boston members of Parliament, Sir Anthony Irby and William Ellis, had been indicted with many others in Lincolnshire for high treason in having sided with the Parliament. Boston became, in 1643, an important centre of Parliamentary military activity, General Fairfax calling it the "key of the associated counties." This means the agreement or association of the eastern counties generally in support of the Parliament against the king. Cromwell was in command in the neighborhood of Boston through the remainder of 1643 and a large army was gathered there. Numerous military operations took place in that section and the Royalists were completely defeated at Winceby Field, near by, 11 October, 1643, losing 600 killed and 800 prisoners, although they considerably outnumbered the Parliamentarians. With the end of the year Cromwell departed and this was all of Boston's participation in the war, although most of its leading men were on the side of the Roundheads and the town was a centre of opposition to the King during the whole of the war, which terminated in a tragical way for the personification of the "Divine right of Kings." Bishop Williams of Lincoln wrote in 1646:

"You see the times grow high and turbulent and no one knows where the rage and madness of them may end; I am just come from Boston where I was used very coarsely."

OLD BOSTON, ENGLAND.

On the restoration of the Stuarts in 1662, Boston was punished for its participation by the removal from office of nine Aldermen, eight Councilmen and one Sergeant-at-Mace, also the Mayor. It is gratifying to the Puritan descendants of Cromwell's Ironsides and to the New Englander generally to know that the Mother Boston stood so loyally for the rights of worship and against arbitrary taxation as exemplified by the Stuarts.

By the middle of the eighteenth century the trade of Boston again was reduced to a low ebb through the ruinous state of the river and haven caused by mismanagement and neglect. Floods, high tides and storms also caused great damage. In 1767 Parliament passed an act for improving the fens near Boston, bringing a great tract of land under cultivation and materially improving the town's trade. More high tides seem to have caused devastation periodically. One of these is famous wherever English literature is known and appreciated from the pen of a poet born in Boston, Jean Ingelow. This is her well known "High Tide on the Coast of Lincolnshire, 1571."

The great tide in 1810 (10 November) was the most calamitous of all and the town barely escaped total destruction. Since then there have been no serious difficulties, while the construction of a modern set of docks has given Boston a renewed lease of commercial life. To-day the town has a good and a growing trade and is far from being the sleepy village that some Americans think. It has the charm of antiquity, and its picturesqueness is most pleasing, but it also has modern life, and is growing well, as growth is measured in our conservative mother country. In 1565 Boston had 471 families according to the Harleian manuscript; in 1768 the population was 3470; in 1801 it was 5926; in 1811 it had grown to 8113; in 1880 it was about 15,000 and is to-day not far from 20,000. It will be seen that the percentage of growth of late has been very gratifying.

Reference has been made to John Cotton as easily the greatest man connected with old Boston's history, although John Fox was a native, and also Jean Ingelow. Cotton was Vicar of St. Botolph's Church from 1612 to 1633. He was son of Rowland Cotton, an attorney; was born at Derby 4 December, 1585; showed signs of Puritanism at Cambridge University, where he was a fellow of Emmanuel College and head lecturer, dean, and catechist, with many scholars. He settled at Boston, on invitation, 1612. He became a non-conformist, but continued twenty years in Boston during which time his house was filled with young students, some from Germany and Holland, but most from Cambridge, finishing their studies. Burnham's "Pious Memorials" quoted in an old history of Boston, published in 1818, says :

"His distinguished piety and extensive usefulness having sufficiently exposed him to the malice of the prelates, letters missive were out against him from the infamous high commission court. As he knew that if he appeared there he could expect no other than to be stifled with such a perpetual imprisonment as had already murdered Bates, Udal, etc. he concealed himself as well as he could from the search of the officers. Application was made in the mean time to the Earl of Dorset, for the fulfilling of an old engagement of his to Mr. Cotton and the Earl did intercede for him, but the Archbishop of Canterbury rendered all his intercessions both ineffectual and unseasonable. Lord Dorset therefore informed Mr. Cotton that if he had been guilty of drunkenness, uncleanness or any such lesser fault he could have obtained his pardon, but as he was guilty of Puritanism and non-conformity the crime was unpardonable, and therefore he advised him to flee for his safety. In consequence Cotton and two other ministers, Hooker and Stone, embarked on the same vessel for New England, arriving 3 September, 1633. Cotton died 23 December, 1652."

John Cotton's work and influence in New England are graven in letters of gold on the pages of our history. It is pleasant to know that in old Boston his learning, sincerity, ability and greatness are appreciated keenly and are honored more and more with the years; the various histories of the town give ready praise and on the whole a just analysis of his motives in holding to the Puritan side of the great controversy, and a becoming pride is taken in his great work in the new England and in the growth and influence of the new Boston as reflecting on the mother Boston. The New England Bostonian finds warmest welcome in the Lincolnshire Boston; the people are decidedly hospitable, and in St. Botolph's Church and the quaint little book shop within its shadow—a building fairly bulging with age, albeit of stone—he is made to feel at home indeed. Old Boston has many old families and men and women proud of the past who delight in historical and literary research, and these appreciate warmly the eminence in literature which distinguishes the Boston of the west. The visitor from Tri-mountain to St. Botolph's town has no lack of courteous aid in his inquiries about the old town, and there is a delight in meeting us and in pointing out the places of interest, in talking about the history of the town and its great grown-up daughter, that is most enjoyable. The typical English conservatism and our own Boston reserve give way, and Bostonians, separated in their homes by more than 3,000 miles, get together right loyally in "the sympathy of kindred minds" in the dear old streets and quaint old buildings of the Boston of the fens. This most charming courtesy and kindliness of the people of old Boston towards the American visitor is not the least of the pleasures of a pilgrimage to the mother town.

Boston Church, otherwise the parish Church of St. Botolph, is the most prominent feature of the town. It is the second or third largest parish church in England, and while lacking transepts and other adjuncts of a cathedral, yet is larger than some of the seats of the Bishops of the English establishment and is certainly much more imposing than many of them. It has antiquity, solidity, beauty and history, with one of the most imposing spires to be seen on any church, even in Europe. This spire known locally as "The Boston Stump" gives a view of the surrounding country that is superb. The foundations were laid in 1309 at the time when Boston was at the height of its commercial prosperity, but the nave and chancel are thought to be even older. The account of the foundation of the present edifice by an old historian is interesting :

"Anno 1309 in the third yeare of King Edward ye 2nd, the foundation of Boston steeple, on the next Monday after Palm Sunday, was begun to be dug by many miners, and so continued till midsummer following, at which time they were deeper than the haven by 5 foot, and they found a bed of stone upon a spring of sand, and that laid upon a bed of clay, the thickness of which could not be known. Then upon the Monday, next after the feast of St. John Baptist was laid the first stone by Dame Margery Tilney, and thereon laid shee five pound sterling ; Sir John Truesdale, then parson of Boston, gave also five pounds more. These were all ye great guifts at that time."

It is a most interesting building, whereof the spire is easily the most interesting part. The delicacy of the stone work is remarkable. It has been compared to the tower of the famous church of Antwerp and it does not suffer in the comparison. It is in the perpendicular style of architecture, a word usually abbreviated in the guide-books, hence the amusing error of the American lady who affected knowledge of architecture not possessed and described one of England's celebrated cathedrals as being in "perp." style, which was right as far as it went, but had a canine sound altogether out of keeping with the dignity of the subject. The main body of St. Botolph's Church is of the decorative style, and the name is well deserved in this case. Interiorly the Church shows the marks of the stern days of the Commonwealth, and many are the brasses which were pulled up and taken down; many the beautiful objects of art which fell before the Puritan's iconoclastic fury when at last he turned on the "Divine Right" of King and Prelate and demonstrated the diviner right of the Englishman and of the Christian. The Church had fallen somewhat into decay with the decadence of Boston commercially, and it is another odd coincidence that it was used as a cavalry stable by the Parliamentary army—a coincidence when the use made by the British troops in the daughter Boston of our Old South is remembered. It was not until 1840 that the work of restoration of St. Botolph's was undertaken and it was completed in 1853. Two years later the Cotton Chapel, which had been used as an engine house, was restored and named by New England Bostonians in honor of the illustrious Vicar of St. Botolph's and the first minister of the Puritan Church in the city by the Charles. The Latin inscription, written by Edward Everett, reads:

"In perpetual remembrance of John Cotton who during the reigns of James and Charles was for many years a grave, skilful, learned and laborious Vicar of this Church. Afterwards, on account of the miserable commotion amongst sacred affairs in his own country, he sought a new settlement in a new world, and remained even to the end of his life a pastor and teacher of the greatest reputation and of the greatest authority in the first church of Boston in New England, which receives this venerable name in honor of Cotton. Ccxxxv years having passed away since his migration, his descendants and the American citizens of Boston were invited to this pious work by their English brethren, in order that the name of an illustrious man, the love and honor of both worlds, might not any longer be banished from that noble temple in which he diligently, learnedly and sacredly expounded the divine oracles for so many years ; and they have willingly and gratuitously caused this shrine to be restored and this tablet to be erected in the year of our recovered salvation, 1855."

The tower rises to a height of 272 feet, being surmounted by an octagonal lantern from which in former times a warning beacon guided navigators and travellers through the surrounding fens. Two hundred years are said to have been consumed in the erection of the building, extending through the reigns of ten sovereigns. It is not over and above well embellished, for reasons already indicated, but it does not inspire one with chilliness ; on the contrary the spell of the great Vicar is over one, as he sees in use to-day the same pulpit which he honored for a generation, and the realization that here indeed we are at the birthplace of our great Boston and all that is meant thereby of progress, of education, of culture and of influence invests dear old St. Botolph's with a glory far greater than gorgeous stained glass, or rich treasures of art. It is hallowed by an honored past and by the sense of the mighty influence which went forth from this minister of the fens to the new world where Puritanism became sweetened and worked out to triumphant success its great part in the elevation of mankind, in the freeing of human thought and activity, religious and political.

Nevertheless St. Botolph's possesses rich chancel carvings, claimed to be surpassed by no church in England and what brasses remain are well worthy inspection. The organ, first mentioned in 1480, has been restored and entirely reconstructed. The ceiling of the tower is 140 feet high, and it is a curious fact that the Church conforms in a number of ways to the divisions of time. There are 365 steps to the summit of the tower, there are 52 windows, 12 pillars, 24 steps to the library and 60 steps leading to the chancel. From the tower one sees the beautiful river Witham, with ancient ruins, Lincoln Cathedral (on a clear day), the Wash, and the distant Norfolk hills, with little villages, church spires, and an altogether inspiring English landscape, wherein sea and fen mingle most charmingly.

"Boston Stump," as the tower of St. Botolph's is called locally, dominates the view everywhere in and around Boston, and the visitor soon comes to look for it wherever he may be in and around the town. The guild hall, or town hall, is as old as the church, probably older, and has been mentioned above as containing in its basement or cellars the cells wherein were confined the Scrooby Pilgrims after their first attempt at escape to the Netherlands. Numerous old buildings, with projecting upper stories, greet the eye almost everywhere in old Boston's streets, and the inns, particularly the Peacock, are delightful to the lover of the antique. This tavern was doing business long before the migration of Pilgrim and Puritan to New England, and to-day the descendants of those exiles delight to wander through its quaint, long corridors, its low ceilinged and musty rooms, richly wainscotted, out to the skittle-ground, where the good, old English game still goes on as it has done in the same spot for centuries. The heavily panelled coffee room, with its antique fireplace and mantel, make the New England Bostonian fairly yearn to transport, first one piece of furniture, then another, then the whole room, and finally the whole inn to our Boston. We have no such inns here, and few indeed there are in England. The Red Lion too, is a jolly old place of entertainment for man and beast, entered under an archway into the inn yard, where behind an open window in the summer days sits the typical red cheeked, plump English country bar-maid, while the villagers sit outside with their ale and pipes, contemplating the sides of bacon and the hams hung up above, with the activities of the old inn yard, fairly realizing the descriptions of Dickens in the accounts of the peregrinations of the immortal Pickwick. Would that the genial old president of that famous Pickwick Club had visited Boston as he did Rochester, and Cobham, and Ipswich and Bury St. Edmunds and the many other places celebrated as never before by the master touch of humor of the great novelist.

And Boston has pastry shops, too, if you do not want the "joint and the sweet" of the inn — shops where you may have a little back room for a quiet tea, with shrimps of the kind avored particularly by Sairey Gamp, with bread buttered for you in generous quantity and of unimpeachable quality, and all the delicacies of wondrous variety in tarts and goodies comprehended under the name of "sweets." Then from the Guild-Hall we turn down Spain Lane, full of quaint, low, old stone houses and warehouses, more than four hundred years old some of them, which is named, not in honor of our late antagonist, but for the De Spayne family, Boston merchants of the fourteenth century. A curious, half-timbered building nearer the centre of the town, Shodfriars-hall, commemorates one of the numerous monastic orders which was settled in Boston prior to the reformation, literally meaning monks or friars who wore sandals — were shod, in fact, instead of going barefooted. This hall is restored, but in harmony with the old style of architecture, after the fashion followed notably in Chester, and increasing in other English towns, and is used now for concerts and other public entertainments. Another hall, named for a prominent old Boston merchant, called Peascod, recalls memories of Shakespeare's delightful "Midsummer Night's Dream." The streets, some of them, suggest our Boston — High, West, and South and Cornhill Lane, but most of them are peculiar to Boston itself. Wormgate and Wide and Straight Bargate, Pump Square, Bridge Foot, Stanbow Lane, Mitre Lane, Greyfriars Lane, Liquorpond Street and Petticoat Lane are examples, and of course there is the Market Place, for all English towns of any size at all have a market place wherein once or twice a week country produce is bought and sold, and market days are the days generally on which to see Boston or any town at its best. Boston is one of the most curious old towns in England, with a large, irregular market place, quaint antique buildings and a strong suggestion of the picturesque towns on the other side of the North Sea. It is quiet enough save on the market days, when the streets swarm with country folk and the bustle has a delicious old world character most novel to the American.

Much indeed do we owe to the fair town of Lincolnshire, that it gave us of its best and noblest in manhood in the Puritan Cotton, servant of God and builder of New England; the inspiration of an honored ancestry which dared to follow conscience, and which has been most richly blessed in this new world which they won for liberty of worship and of government. Pleasant is the thought that in the old England our Pilgrim Fathers found some little softening of the almost universal rigor of their treatment in Boston town and that even then there was a sympathetic drawing together of Pilgrim and Puritan which prefigured the complete assimilation in later years in the new England of the two grandest types of Anglo-Saxon manhood. Long may the noble tower of the good St. Botolph stand not only a beacon for the traveller by sea and land but as an inspiration to us in this new Boston to holier, better living, for that we have in trust that honored name.

[Scrap Book, p. 61]

the testimony of nathaniel winslow aged fifty yeares or theare-abouts & of Samuell Litle aged thirty three years or thear abouts

these Deponants testify & say that we being at Boston att the superiour court there held on July 31 1688 we heard then & ther read a writt of Ejection in which John Doe complaines of Richard Roe: wee allso testify that John Bradford then and there appeared as Defendant in that Action for Richard Roe above named Also we saw said Bradford againe appeare att
Boston at the next superiour court there held on october 30 1688 and heard him declare he then expected to be called to answer to the writt abovesaid we said Deponents doe further testify that on the next superior court held at Boston on January 29: 16 $\frac{88}{9}$ wee then and there saw said Bradford at Boston and herd him then declare that his only businesse to that court was to Answer the writt of Ejection above mentioned and further saith not

Sworn in Court march ye 18th 16 $\frac{89}{9}$ by the persons above named viz^t Nath^l Winslow and Sam Little

Attest Sam^l Sprague Clerk

From this deposition we learn that Samuel^s Little (Ann^s Warren, Richard^l) was born about the year 1657.

On the grave stone of Capt. Nathaniel Winslow at Marshfield it is stated that he died 1 December, 1719, in the eighty-first year of his age. If his birth occurred in the year 1639 this statement does not conflict with that in the deposition.
